The opportunity

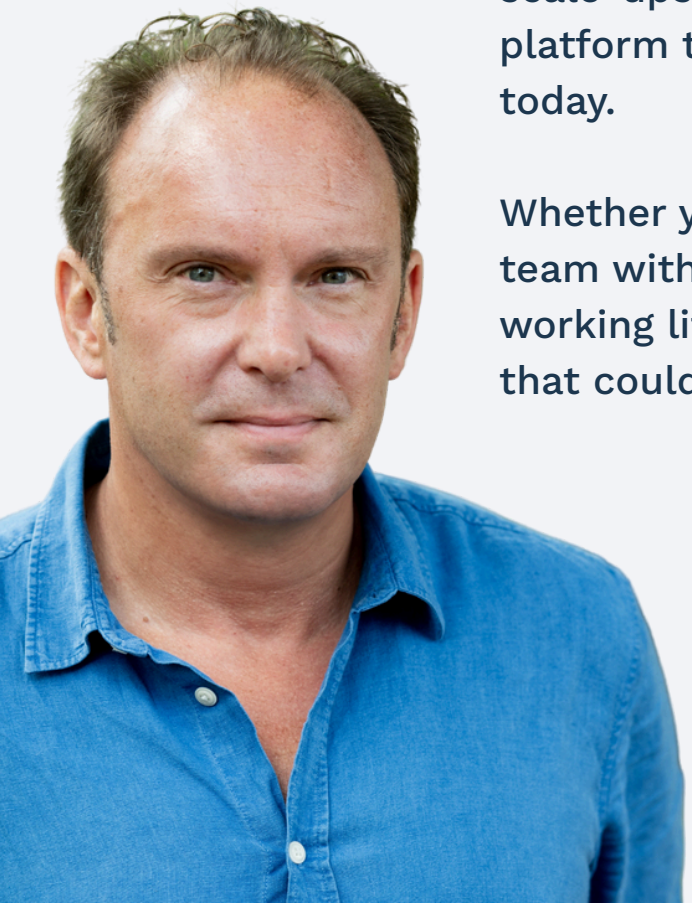

Your next move should give you greater control over your future.

At Jurit, we offer experienced lawyers the opportunity to build and grow their practice within a modern boutique firm designed for entrepreneurial clients and senior professionals.

Our model combines autonomy with access to high-calibre colleagues and practical support that enables lawyers to deliver premium advice to businesses, founders and families.

Since 2013, our virtual structure has been central to how we work. It brings together autonomous working, a transparent fee-share model and the collaborative relationships that help a practice thrive. We support lawyers who advise SMEs, scale-ups and private clients, and who want a platform that reflects the way their clients operate today.

Whether you want to expand your practice, bring a team with you or create more autonomy in your working life, we would be pleased to explore what that could look like at Jurit.

"Jurit's collaborative culture, senior expertise and entrepreneurial model were a strong fit for me. Complex family matters increasingly overlap with tax, trusts, succession and business interests, and Jurit's model allows us to work seamlessly across those issues."

Christian Abletshauser, Partner, Family Law.

More control over your practice

With 75% fee retention and no billing targets, you can focus on delivering exceptional advice and strengthening the client relationships that define your practice. You shape how and where you work, organising your professional life around your clients, responsibilities and personal commitments - supported by the systems and people that help you run your practice effectively.

Expertise your clients can draw on

We advise founders, executives, entrepreneurial businesses and families across their business and personal legal needs. Our expertise brings together corporate and commercial work, employment, incentives, tax, private wealth and complementary disciplines, including family law. This creates opportunities to introduce trusted colleagues and support clients as their businesses grow and their circumstances evolve.

A partnership you can contribute to

We welcome experienced lawyers with established client relationships who take pride in their work and want to contribute to a collaborative, senior-lawyer environment. We grow selectively, placing importance on professional standards, judgement and how colleagues work together. You join a partnership where your experience and ideas can help shape the firm’s future.

Working life and culture

Your practice. Your ambitions. Room to realise both.

Independence works best when you have colleagues you can turn to.

At Jurit, our work flexibility sits alongside regular opportunities to share expertise, build relationships and contribute to the business.

Shape your working week

Our partners have different working patterns, priorities and commitments. You decide how to organise your working life while meeting your responsibilities to clients and colleagues.

Everyone works from home. Cloud based systems provide access to the tools and information we need, supported by specialist IT assistance.
When an in-person meeting is the right choice, we have access to client meeting facilities in the City of London.

That flexibility gives you more scope to combine a rewarding legal practice with the other things that matter to you.

Get to know the people behind the expertise

Collaboration grows from knowing your colleagues, how they work, what they specialise in and where they can help.

Regular team meetings bring colleagues together to share knowledge, discuss opportunities and build those relationships. These take place virtually or in person in central London, and we encourage attendance whenever possible.

Meanwhile social occasions provide time to catch up informally away from client work.

Have a voice in the firm's future

As a partner, you can contribute to decisions about the business and how it develops.

Monthly partners' meetings provide a forum for discussion and relationship building. Partners can also contribute through working groups covering areas such as technology, people, business development and finance.

These offer a practical way to put your experience and ideas to work, alongside colleagues from across the firm.

Financial Model

A move needs to make commercial sense.

Our financial model recognises the work you deliver, the clients you introduce and your contribution to supporting colleagues.

Summary	Partner fee allocation
Work you originate and undertake yourself	75% of fees billed and paid by the client
Work you originate and refer to another member of the firm	15% of income received
Work carried out solely by a consultant for whom you act as supervising partner	5% of income received

Share in the firm's success

Year-end profit distributions are allocated through Profit Share Units (PSUs). New partners receive one PSU on joining, with the potential to increase over time, linked to annual fees, up to a maximum of four PSUs. We will explain how the scheme operates and how your entitlement can develop as your practice grows.

Understand the commitment

All partners make a capital contribution - we will explain the amount and the arrangements during our discussions.

Bring your team into the conversation

If you would like to bring some or all of your existing team, we can discuss the practical arrangements that would apply. Understanding how your team works, the support it needs and its ambitions will help us explore the right approach together.

Practical Support

Expert assistance allowing you to focus on your clients.

Running a successful practice takes more than just legal expertise. Our management and support team helps with the day-to-day demands of practice and the development of your business.

When you join, we take time to understand how you work, agree the support you need and plan your integration into the firm.

The tools to work effectively

Our practice management and technology support includes:

- Professional practice management, secretarial and administrative support.
- Case and practice management software and cloud-based file sharing.
- Specialist IT assistance.
- Professional indemnity insurance and practising certificate renewal.

Support to manage your income

Clear financial information and effective billing processes help you stay in control of your practice. We provide billing software, invoicing support, credit control and financial reporting, helping you manage the process from work undertaken to payment received.

Help to build your profile and relationships

Our marketing and business development support helps you communicate your expertise and pursue relevant opportunities.

This can include:

- One-to-one support to plan your business development activity.
- Assistance with client communications, website content, social media and public relations.
- Support with bids, tenders and events.
- Opportunities to collaborate with colleagues.
- Access to City client meeting facilities.

We work with you to identify activity that fits your practice, clients and ambitions.

What would you like your next chapter to look like?

It starts with a conversation.

Choosing a new firm is a significant decision. You may have a clear plan, or you may simply want to understand your options.

An initial conversation gives you the chance to tell us about your practice, ask questions about our model and consider whether Jurit could be the right fit.

All conversations are confidential and without obligation.
